Sentences reduced in federal drug cases

by Tony Fyffe
BSN Managing Editor

PIKEVILLE — A federal judge last week reduced the prison terms of four Eastern Kentucky men serving time on drug-related charges.

U.S. District Judge Amul R. Thapar's action follows a decision last year by the United States Sentencing Commission to lower prison for certain drug offenders, according to his order filed Jan. 27.

Upon his own motion, Thapar reduced sentences in four federal drug cases "based on a guideline range that has subsequently been lowered and made retroactive" by the commission, the judge's order said.

Amendment 782 to the U.S. Sentencing Commission Guidelines Manual takes effect Nov. 1, 2015, and revises the guideline ranges applicable to drug-trafficking offenses, according to a standing order Thapar entered in December.

"As a result of this amendment, federal drug-trafficking defendants may be eligible for a reduction in their terms of imprisonment," Thapar's December order said.

The reasons for the amendment "are to reflect the Commission's determination that setting the base

TALKING TRASH

New Martin County ordinance includes garbage pickup

by Lilly Adkins
Associate Editor

INEZ — By March, Martin County residents are expected to be paying for their trash to be picked up under an ordinance given a first reading by the fiscal court Thursday.

The ordinance also would allow the county's transfer stations to remain open, but only to Martin County residents with proof of identification from a driver's license or a state ID card.

A large crowd attended Thursday's meeting, during which county members scrapped the previous ordinance and a new 19-page ordinance was read for the first time. They also held a meeting Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of approving the advertising of the ordinance.

Although a vote wasn't cast during the first reading, each of the magistrates said why they would vote for it after the second reading.

Judge-Executive Kelly Callaham said he thought that franchising the garbage collection was the best plan, adding that it would be cheaper.

Both District 3 Magistrate Darrell Mills and District 4 Magistrate John Harmon agreed that the cost was too high, but that it was good because there were LOUISA — Six people were arrested in Lawrence County Jan. 20 on meth-related charges.

Leslie S. Triplett, 39, Weslie B. Triplett, 39, Jamie Triplett, 33, Steven Holbrook, 38, and Larry Salyer, 50, all of Louisa, along with Shandra Wells, 41, of Floyd County, were arrested and charged with manufacturing meth. More charges are pending.

According to a press release issued by the Lawrence County Sheriff's Office, chief deputy Mark Wheeler and deputy Mason Keefer went to a residence on Swift Lane in an attempt to serve a warrant on Leslie S. Triplett and to follow up on an investigation involving the purchase of large amounts of pseudoephedrine by several residents and possible meth activity.

While serving the warrant, deputies observed numerous items of paraphernalia that included a loaded syringe, the release said.

Signal installation begins near school in Johnson

WITTENSVILLE – New signal installation in Johnson County on U.S. 23 at Ky. 1559 near W.R. Castle Elementary School could take another two months, according to Keith Coleman, traffic superintendent at Highway District 12 of the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet.

Off-road work of pouring footers and setting poles is finished, and utility relocation is under way. Prep work off-road for advance warning flashers is nearly complete.

Crews are moving into the lanes of traffic to build 10 signal heads, three each northbound and southbound and two each on the side roads. They will saw loops for signal detection and install the control cabinet.

"All this work is weather dependent," Coleman said. "Anything more than intermittent light rain showers would interfere with the work. Any time the roadway is wet, work will be interrupted."

Assuming the weather cooperates, work is scheduled from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday for the next several weeks.

Traffic will be reduced to one lane at times when the new span is raised across the highway. Motorists are asked to observe warning signs, merge cones and signs, and flaggers.

HIGHWAY DISTRICT 12 signal technicians install the framework for advance warning flashers as part of new traffic signals on U.S. 23 in Johnson County near W.R. Castle Elementary.

GARBAGE: New ordinance receives first reading

stipulations for low-income residents to receive the service for $10. They also agreed that it was good for the county to do it because it can provide local jobs.

District 2 Magistrate Gary Hunt said he knew of people who were providing pickup in his district at a cost of $20, so it would save some people money and provide local jobs.

District 5 Magistrate Victor Slone agreed with Callaham that it would be best to franchise it out.

"The best route is to franchise it out," Slone said. "It's cheaper, and they don't come and do anything, we tell them what to do. We tell them what we want them to do and it's up to the fiscal court to tell them, we are in control."

"This puts us in the garbage business," Callaham said. "We are going to pick up the trash for every household, and if you don't want to do that you can opt out in through our mailer."

The expense of trash disposal has plagued Martin County with a huge loss in coal severance tax revenue and has even been the cause of the layoff of 10 employees, but Callaham said during the meeting that most of them would be rehired.

Based on the new ordinance, the cost of having garbage picked up will be $18 per household. The fee would come in the form of a separate bill to handled through the Martin County Water District, which currently has the capability of producing a card for billing purposes that would be cheaper to send out to customers and agreed that they will do it for $1 per household. Homeowners paying the $18 bill will also still have the ability to take their trash to the transfer station if they deem it necessary before the next pickup date. Those who want to continue to take their trash to the transfer station would pay-$15, unless they are low income residents, who would be charged $10. Businesses will be assessed a fee of $50 per month.

Deputy Judge-Executive Mike Crum would be the coordinator of the solid waste management program for Martin County.

Storage containers for residential solid waste would be required if bags of garbage are subject to be torn or damaged by animals or would create spillage and litter, the ordinance says. Containers should not weigh more than 50 lbs.

No airtight containers such as a refrigerator or icebox should be left outside the residence without first removing the doors, the ordinance said.

Points of collection of solid waste would be from the roadside or curbside within public rights of way or other locations near buildings, parking lots, etc. Solid waste generated in disposable containers shall be placed along the roadside or curbside front the property, not more than 12 hours before collection, the ordinance said.

Items too bulky to put in storage containers would not be collected by the solid waste hauler, but could be dropped off by the owner at a transfer station during hours of operation.

Solid waste collectors would be authorized to enter upon private property to collect solid waste as required by the ordinance, but would not be allowed not enter dwelling units or other residential buildings to get garbage, the ordinance said.

Solid waste, other than bulky waste, would be collected at least once weekly unless the household has completed the necessary paperwork and has opted to take household solid waste to the transfer facility.

All solid waste would be required to be bagged and then placed in a proper container, the ordinance said.

Hazardous waste, liquid waste, bulky wastes such as furniture or appliances, tires, construction and demolition wastes, dead animals, any burning or smolder materials, or other materials that would create a fire hazard, batteries and any other items designated by the cabinet not proper for solid waste landfills would be prohibited and not allowed to be deposited in solid waste containers or receptacles the ordinance also said.

Transfer facilities would be staffed by the county and open a minimum of 16 hours per week, determined by the county judge/executive, with two attendants at all times, the ordinance said.

Proof of county residence would be required at the transfer station in the form of a valid Martin County, driver's license or state-issued identification card. Disposal by non-county residents would not be accepted unless the waste is contained in a specific bag purchased at the office of the Martin County Judge Executive at a cost of $3 per bag, the ordinance said.

No county resident could pick up, collect or transfer non-county household waste without purchasing the approved bags.

Any person and/or business owner who has their household waste or commercial solid waste collected by a hauler who does not dispose of waste at a Martin County transfer station would be required to provide appropriate documentation to the judge's office that would include the hauler's name, address, phone number and a receipt for at least six months, the ordinance said. Upon presentation of the appropriate documentation, the person or business owner would not be charged a service fee.

Every household in the county would designate the manner in which their household waste will be collected. The county would send out a mailer required to be filled out in its entirety and submitted back to the county, the ordinance said. Information would include names of persons in the household, whether they pay a water bill, the manner in which the household waste will be collected, a phone number, physical address and mailing address.

If a household's combined income is less than $12,000 per year, verified through the Big Sandy Community Action Program, the head of the household can provide documentation to the judge-executive. Once verification is received, the service charge would be $10 per month for that household.

The charge for the collection of garbage would be billed either to the occupant or the property owners as reflected in the Martin County PVA's Office, and both the occupant and property owner would jointly and severally be liable for the collection fee.

"It is the intent of this section to make property owners fully liable for unpaid solid waste disposal fees in connection with the collection services for the owner's property," the ordinance said.

All unpaid fees would become delinquent if payment is not received within 30 days of the notice and shall bear interest at the rate of the water company delinquency rate.

The county would enforce collection of delinquent bills by bringing legal action against the owner or occupant of any dwelling unit or owner of any commercial establishment to recover any sums due plus a reasonable attorney's fee, court costs and any other costs involved, the ordinance also said.

Any person providing false information in any document filed or required to be maintained under the solid waste ordinance would be liable for a civil penalty of not less than $50 nor more than $500. Each day upon which a violation occurs constitutes a separate violation and for a first offense within a two-year period a specific civil fine of $25 per day will be imposed and for each subsequent offense within a two-year period from the date of payment or conviction on the first offence a specific civil fine of $50 per day upon which there is a violation in a two year period, a civil fine of $500 per day will be imposed on the first offense.

Any penalties levied or damages recovered would be in addition to any other remedies under federal, state or local law, the ordinance says.

Restrictions of solid waste which includes materials that are unacceptable and shall be unlawful for any person to deposit in a transfer station, unless a container is specifically provided for that purpose, would include chemicals, concrete, cement, blocks, bricks, lumber or other construction or demolition materials, dead animals, explosives or other volatile substances, fire embers, ashes and other such fire-causing material, gasoline, oils or other liquid hydrocarbons, herbicides, industrial or commercial waste, except as specifically provided for liquids other than those contained in customary household waste, metal, or wire in large amounts, motor vehicles, nuclear or radioactive waste, pathological wastes, pesticides, poisons, road construction materials including but not limited to asphalt, gravel, etc. sludge of semi-solid fluids, tree stumps or logs or toxic waste.

Martin County isn't currently equipped with garbage collection trucks, and Callaham explained that for now the county would be using pickup trucks to collect garbage throughout the county.

"This should be in place by March and they will start sending out bills," Callaham said. "I'm hoping by at least the end of March that we will be able to begin picking up garbage."

Several people commented about the ordinance and also asked questions. One person asked why he would be responsible for the bill if there were people living in some of his properties, because he was allowing his daughter to reside at one location and had a tenant in another.

County Attorney Kennis Maynard said that it was up to him whether he made his daughter or the tenant pay for their garbage, but that ultimately he would be held responsible because he owns the property.

"It's up to you, you can raise the rent by $18," Maynard said. "I'm not going to pay mine and let you get away with not paying your bill."

Thomas Delong said he thought it a waste of money to pay the water company to do the billing at an estimated $4,000 per year and that he would rather pay the judge's office directly.

Callaham said that it was more economical to have the water company do the billing because it is already equipped to do it more efficiently and at a cheaper rate for postage but that they might look at that later.

Another person questioned what the county planned to do with any surplus money they may have, and Callaham said that he didn't know if there would be a surplus but that if there is it would be nice to use it for a compactor or illegal dumps. He also said there would be cameras set up at the transfer stations.

Another person asked about the fee for churches, and Callaham said they are exempt from the fee.

Another person asked about Recycling Solutions Technology and what the situation is with the company.

"You know, incineration would be the finest thing, but I've dealt with them for years and they are rebuilding something now, so who knows how long that will be," Callaham said. "I may invite them to the next court meeting so they can talk to you."

Callaham, prior to the reading of the ordinance, also addressed the fact that one magistrate resigned and pointed out that a replacement for the position would be appointed by the governor.

"People are here for one reason, and they made that magistrate resign. Social media is mean," Callaham said. "Nathan Harless worked harder on that issue than most. He called all around and made the best decision he could. He's a very religious person, and people are so cruel. I don't like that. If anybody has something they'd like to say, say it to me. It's the cowardly way to say something and to not face someone when you have something to say."

Maynard said he is proud to know Harless.

Danetta Wells addressed the court about Martin County's dog issue and pointed out that the organization she is with, Sadie's Place, rescues animals from all over and that they need help with the vetting so they can help get the animals moved to homes because they have to pay for spay and neutering services as well as shots.

Slone pointed out that residents with pets should show personal responsibility for the animals they have, and Wells said that it doesn't always work that way.

The court also approved the county continuity ordinance, which only takes effect if Callaham becomes unable to serve as judge. Should that happen, Crum would take his place and if Crum became unable to serve as judge, the job would fall to Slone.

Hunt made a motion approving the ordinance, which was seconded by Harmon, with all in favor.

LMS quick recall team makes history, heads to state competition

LOUISA — For the first time in its, Louisa Middle School's quick recall team has advanced to state competition.

The team lost to Russell but advances to the Kentucky Governor's Cup as the Region 18 runner-up.

Although Russell is the No. 1 team in the region, LMS placed second overall after having placed fourth the last two years.

The LMS quick recall team defeated Boyd County, lost to Russell, defeated Ashland, Rowan County, and Raceland, and finally played Russell again in the regional championship.

"We cannot express how proud we are of the Lawrence County Middle School Smart Dawgs," academic coaches Bill and Deana Hammond said in their announcement of the advancement to state.

Several LMS students advanced to the state Governor's Cup in written assessments with the opportunity to compete for championships in their individual areas.

Last year, Carrie Jo Cecil finished No. 1 in the state in language arts, and this year, her sister, Kate Cecil, advances to state in language arts and arts & humanities along with Abby Fletcher and Shaylon Moore, who are advancing to state in math, and Lincoln Rose in social studies.

In regional competition in the mathematics contest, Abby Fletcher was fourth, Shaylon Moore was fifth and Brock Kessinger placed 15th. In social studies, Lincoln Rose was fourth, William Lampert was 14th and Mark Webb was 18th. In arts & humanities, Kate Cecil was second, Alexis Erwin was 10th, and Sahara Hundley was 13th. In science, Jacob Kessinger came in sixth (a three-way tie) and Abby Fletcher came in eighth, while in language arts, Kate Cecil came in fourth, Ashley Hayes was ninth and Sahara Hundley was 14th. Ashley Hayes came in seventh in written assessment.

"Congratulate our students when you see them," the coaches said in the email. "Your hard work as teachers, parents and administrators and the hard work of your students have yielded results that a few years ago we only dreamed of."

CASES: 4 federal defendants get lower sentences offense levels above mandatory minimum penalties is no longer necessary and that a reduction would be an appropriate step toward alleviating the overcapacity of the federal prisons," according to the commission's policy statement.

The statement says that the number of "cases potentially involved is large, and the magnitude of the change in the guideline range is significant."

"The Commission determined that an estimated 46,000 offenders may benefits from retroactive application of Amendment 782" and that the "average reduction would be approximately 18 percent," the statement says.

The "administrative burdens of applying Amendment 782 retroactively are significant but manageable given the one-year delay in the effective date, which allows courts and agencies more time to prepare," the statement says.

The commission made the change after conducting a public hearing on the issue in June.

"The Commission determined that public safety, among other factors, requires a limitation on retroactive application of Amendment 782," the statement says. "In light of the large number of cases potentially involved, the Commission determined that the agencies of the federal criminal justice system responsible for the offenders' reentry into society need time to prepare, and to help the offenders prepare, for that reentry."

Under the amendment, a judge "shall determine the amended guideline range that would have been applicable to the defendant if the amendment(s) to the guidelines . . . had been in effect at the time the defendant was sentenced."

In his December order, Thapar denied without prejudice all outstanding motions for a reduced sentence.

"As soon as possible, and no later than March 1, 2015, the Court will consider whether to reduce the sentences of eligible defendants and will issue appropriate orders," Thapar's order says. "Until then, all motions for a reduced sentence are dismissed without prejudice. Defendants may submit motions to reduce their sentences beginning March 1, 2015, if the Court has not already entered an order in their case by that date. The Court reminds defendants that it is not authorized to reduce a sentence of imprisonment in a manner that releases a defendant from prison before November 1, 2015."

Federal defendants whose sentences were reduced by Thapar last week include:

• Ernest Wayne Grubbs, whose 87-month sentence was reduced to 70 months. Grubbs pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute 1,000 kilograms of marijuana in Floyd County in 2010.

• Theodore Parker, who pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute pills containing oxycodone and to distribution of the pills in Floyd and Pike counties in 2009 and 2010. His original 120-month sentence was reduced to 97 months.

• Timothy L. Rich, who was sentenced to 100 months after pleading guilty to conspiracy to distribute pills containing oxycodone in Pike County in 2009. His sentence was cut to 97 months.

• Donald J. Adams Jr., who was sentenced to 109 months after pleading guilty to conspiracy to distribute oxycodone in the Pike County area in 2009. His sentence was lowered to 88 months.

ESCAPEE: Floyd man caught

Cox escaped Jan. 23 while being transported to Mountain Comprehensive Care in Prestonsburg for an evaluation. While in the custody of jail officials, Cox, assisted by Meyers was, able to escape, the press release said.

At the time of the release, Meyers had not been identified, but the Floyd County Sheriff's Office was aware that the accomplice was a female and said she would be charged after she is identified.

Floyd County Sheriff John Hunt said in his releases that he believed Cox may have connections in Michigan and Florida and that he may have possibly fled to those connections for refuge.

"We are happy to report that Floyd County Jail Escapee Michael Cox was taken into custody yesterday evening by Michigan Authorities," Hunt said. "Thanks to those of you who called and gave information pertaining to the investigation."

Hunt said in his release that he attributes Cox's arrest largely due to the cooperation of Floyd Co Sheriff's Office and multiple Michigan law enforcement agencies.

Hunt also thanked the Kentucky State Police Intelligence Section for their assistance in identifying Cox's accomplice.

plaint Jan. 27 from the Open Fork area of David on Brent Hale, and deputies Dusty Newsome and Sgt. Kevin Shepherd responded.

Upon their arrival, deputies searched the area, but could not locate Hale, although they did find and follow foot tracks in the fresh snow to a nearby home.

While Shepherd was speaking with and questioning the occupants of the residence, he and Newsome heard "suspicious sounds" coming from underneath the house, the press release said.

Through further investigation, the officers determined that Hale had taken refuge underneath the residence and was hiding in a narrow and cramped crawl space.

Newsome and Shepherd quickly launched a surprise entrance into the crawl space and "quickly zeroed in" on Hale, calling several times for him to surrender peacefully, the release said.

Hale crawled out from underneath the house through mud and dirt and was retrieved without incident, the release said.

He was taken into custody and transported to the Floyd County Detention Center on the charges contained in the outstanding warrants.

SIX: Meth charges filed in Lawrence County

The deputies then obtained a search warrant for the residence and upon a search located multiple syringes, plates with drug residue, what is believed to be meth, prescription pills and other items of paraphernalia, the release said.

The deputies also located multiple items used to manufacture methamphetamine that included lye, lighter fluid, sulfuric acid and other items, the release said.

A recent shake-and-bake meth lab was located in the kitchen area along with several smoker bottles that still had fumes coming from them and a jar containing what is believed to be meth oil, the release said.

All six people were taken to Three Rivers Medical Center for decontamination before being transported to the Big Sandy Regional Jail in Johnson County.

In addition to Keefer, Wheeler was assisted at the scene by Sheriff Garrett Roberts and deputy Dwayne Bowen.

Anyone with information relating to illegal drug activity in Lawrence County is urged to contact the sheriff's office at (606) 638-4368. Callers can remain anonymous.

Thank You

Perhaps you sent a lovely card or sat quietly in a chair.
Perhaps you sent a floral piece, if so we saw it there.
Perhaps you spoke the kindest words as any friend could say.
Perhaps you were not there at all, just thought of us that day.
Whatever you did to console our hearts,
we thank you so much, whatever the part.

We also thank Dr. Devers, the nurses at Paul B. Hall Hospital, the pepole who brought food, the singers - Charles Mills & family for the beautiful songs, Pastor Frank Mills, Phelps and Sons Funeral Home and all who helped in any way — you are in our prayers.

5 Dangerous Apps You Don't Know Your Kids are Using

by Kim Komando

Kim Komando hosts the nation's largest talk radio show about consumer electronics, computers and the Internet.

If you're a parent or grandparent, you know that kids pick up the latest technology lightning fast. Of course, that means the children in your life can also be using apps and visiting sites that are totally inappropriate for their ages. Worse yet, you might not even realize it.

Let's look at five dangerous apps that the children you deeply care about might be using and why they're dangerous.

1. Snapchat

Snapchat is a picture-messaging app whose claim to fame is that the messages only last for a few seconds once they're opened. Then the messages supposedly evaporate into thin air. In theory, you can send embarrassing or risque pictures without being afraid of someone stealing them or distributing them.

Unfortunately, the claim that Snapchat makes it safe to send risque pictures is just plain wrong. It's way too simple for anyone to grab a screenshot of the image before it's deleted. In fact, several teenage boys have gotten in serious legal trouble over the last few years for capturing and distributing illegal photos sent to them by underage girls.

Also, in October 2014, hackers got their hands on thousands of "deleted" Snapchat images that had been stored on third-party servers. While it wasn't exactly a breach of Snapchat, it's further proof that pictures don't always disappear.

In fairness, many teens use Snapchat for innocent picture-conversations with each other. And as Snapchat grows in popularity, the company is moving further away from its sexting association, but it's still a big concern.

If your teen is using Snapchat, ask them to show you how they're using it. Make sure that your teen is only communicating with people that they know, and that they realize the pictures they send don't just vanish forever. Remind them, "Once on the Internet, always on the Internet!"

2. Tinder

While Snapchat has uses besides sharing inappropriate images, Tinder is all about meeting new romantic partners, which probably isn't something you want your teen doing with strangers.

Tinder allows a person to create a profile and see images of potential romantic matches in the immediate area. The person can choose whether they're interested in another user or not. If two people like each other, then they can have a conversation through the app and potentially "hook up." Again, broadcasting images to strangers and potentially meeting them on a whim is not something teens should be doing, in my parental opinion.

Actually, underage teens aren't even supposed to be using this app. The only way to get on the app is to have a Facebook account with a birth date that indicates the user is over 18 years of age. Of course, it is just a simple keyboard entry for a child to set any birth date they wish. There is no verification of the user's age claim.

Any child who ends up on the app will be meeting people who are over legal age. They might come across predators, scammers

Three Rivers Medical Center to celebrate National Wear Red Day for heart disease

LOUISA — Cardiovascular disease is the No. 1 killer of women in the United States. According to the American Heart association, more women die of heart disease than from the next four causes of death combined, including all forms of cancer.

Eighty percent of cardiac events in the women could be prevented if women would make the right choice involving diet, exercise and abstinence from smoking. Make it your mission to learn all about you can about heart attacks and stroke.

Heart Attack

A heart attack occurs when the blood flow to a part of the heart is blocked, usually by a blood clot. If this clot cuts off the blood flow completely, the part of the heart muscle supplied by that artery begins to die. There are a variety of symptoms beyond chest pain or shortness of breath – many of which go unnoticed by women!

Stroke

Stroke is the number 3 cause of death in America. Stroke and TIA (transient ischemic attack) happen when a blood vessel feeding the brain gets clogged or bursts. The signs of a stroke can include sudden confusion, numbness or severe headaches.

Also, check the time so you'll know when the first symptoms appear. With a stroke, minutes matter. It's very important to take immediate action. Research from the American Heart Association has shown that if given within three hours of the start of symptoms, a clot-busting drug can reduce long-term disability for the most common type of stroke.

New Smile Savers dental program available through KY Dept. for Public Health

LOUISA — The Lawrence County Health Department announced the implementation of the Smile Savers Dental Hygiene Program.

The program is funded through a grant from the Kentucky Department for Public Health and aims to increase access and improve oral health standards in communities across the state. Smile Savers serves both Lawrence and Martin counties and will provide preventive dental hygiene services for students in grades K-8.

The funding allows for a dental hygienist and assistant, portable dental equipment, dental supplies, a transport vehicle and transportation costs.

"The lack of access to adequate dental care is a serious problem across the nation, but it's particularly bad in Kentucky," said Gov. Steve Beshear. "Hundreds of thousands of children in this state don't see a dentist regularly and many not at all. The vast majority of both childhood and adult dental problems could be avoided through routine dental care and other preventive efforts – which is exactly what this program provides. This is a great step forward."

The Smile Savers Team includes Rhonda Collins, public health registered dental hygienist, and Jessie Wellman, certified dental assistant. Colins graduated in 1998 from Prestonsburg Community College and has worked as a dental hygienist for 16 years. She is a Louisa native with two grown daughters and two granddaughters. Collins and her husband reside in Louisa.

Wellman is originally from Lexington and has lived in Louisa for nine years. She graduated from the Lexington Academy of Dental Assisting in 2005. Wellman and her husband are the parents of four children who are active in the Lawrence County School System. "We are so very grateful to have this opportunity to provide dental services for our students and we are blessed to have two energetic, dedicated and caring professionals to lead our program," said Debbie Miller, Lawrence County Health Department director.

The Smile Savers Program will provide oral assessments, cleanings, fluoride varnish and sealant placement on permanent molars. The program also will provide counseling on nutrition, tobacco prevention and cessation and trauma prevention as well as oral health instruction. Services are provided at no cost to parents.

The goal of the Smile Savers Program is for every student to be comfortable and excited to visit a dentist on a regular basis for lifelong dental care. In addition to the Lawrence and Martin County school systems, the team will work in conjunction with local and area dentists to achieve this goal.

Mother and son reunite after 17 years

PAINTSVILLE — Christmas 2014 will be a holiday that Virginia Shepherd will never forget.

"It was my Christmas Eve miracle," Shepherd, of Thelma in Johnson County, said as she recounted her 17-year-old search for the son she lost to the social services system when he was 5.

It was in January 1994 when a knock on her door forever changed her life. On the other side of the door was a social worker who was investigating a complaint that Shepherd had abused her son, Adam. Later, there were allegations that she had also molested him.

Although Shepherd vehemently denied the allegations, Adam was thrown into the state social services system and later adopted by his foster parents, she said.

But Shepherd said she never gave up on finding her son, and last Thanksgiving she asked the girlfriend of her other son, Aaron, to post an old picture of Adam on Facebook.

"The bond that me and Adam had when he was 5 was strong, very strong," she said.

Flash forward to last Christmas Eve, when Shepherd was at the Paintsville Walmart and received a cell phone call from her son Aaron, 23.

"Mom, I need to talk to you, it's important," he told his mother, who told Aaron to go to her house and she would be there soon.

When she got home, a note from Aaron was posted on her door, telling her to go to Aaron's apartment "ASAP," she said.

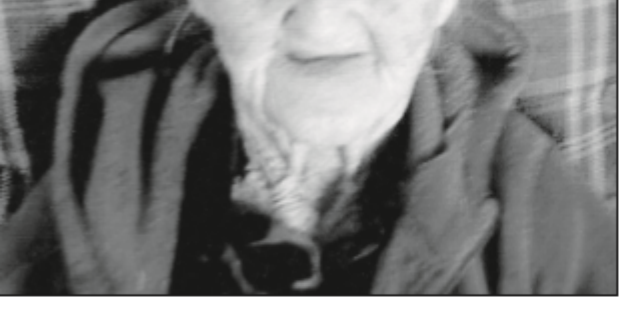
CELEBRATING 100



VIRGIE MCKENZIE HORTON of Lawrence County will celebrate her 100th birthday on Saturday, Feb. 7. She was born in 1915 in Lawrence County. She has twelve children, 38 grandchildren; 44 great-grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

REUNITED: (Continued from A9)

She and her husband, Tim, went to Aaron's apartment, where she got the best news of her life.

"Here he comes with a tablet and said, 'Mom, I've got something to show you,'" Shepherd said, describing Aaron as "excited," to say the least.

"Mom, who's this?" Aaron said, pointing a picture on Facebook of a young man on the tablet. "I said, 'Who is that?' He said, 'Mom, don't you know you that is?'"

Shepherd said she didn't recognize the man.

"Mom, that's Adam!" he told his mother.

"Are you sure that's Adam?" I asked, "and he said, Yeah, Mom. I've been talking to him for three days, Mom."

Aaron explained that he and his grandmother got on Facebook looking for Adam and eventually found him.

"I said, 'Why didn't you tell me three days?' and he said, 'We wanted it to be a surprise, a Christmas surprise, a Christmas gift for you.

At first, Shepherd said she didn't think the man in the picture was her long-lost son.

"A mother would know," she said. "I said, 'Alright, Aaron, is that's Adam, call him.' And then all of a sudden he shows me another picture of him with a sign with my name. Then all of a sudden, I said, 'Oh, my God, that's my son, that's my baby. And I didn't realize it until I saw my name."

Her oldest son then called his brother and told him that Shepherd was there. Mother and son began talking.

"I said, 'Adam, this is your biological mother, Virginia Shepherd, and he said, 'Mommy, Mommy!'

Turns out Adam, now 21, lived in nearby Magoffin County, where they planned on meeting "now," she said.

"I was crying all the way to Magoffin County," she said, and the reunion was every thing she had hoped it would be.

They met in the parking lot of a Magoffin County church.

"Are you Adam Joseph Shepherd, my baby?" she said to him when they first saw each other. "He comes near me and grabs me, and I said, 'I can't let go. I lost you once, I can't do this again. Please promise me you'll never leave me again. Please promise Mom you won't leave her no more.'"

The reunion was the "best Christmas gift any mother could hope for her entire life," Shepherd said.

Adam, whose middle and last names were changed after his adoption, said he started looking for his biological mother after he turned 18. He said he plans to restore his original name.

Adam ended up moving in his Shepherd and her husband, and life has been good since, she said.

Shepherd said she has advice for mothers and fathers who have lost their child to social services.

"I don't want nobody to give up," she said.

and any variety of creeps that no one should have to deal with.

In short, Tinder is dangerous for kids. Keep them away from it.

3. Vine

Vine, the app that lets you record and share six-second videos, seems like a totally safe app at first. It gets dangerous when you consider how strong peer pressure is on social media.

Teens, as I'm sure you remember, will do almost anything for acceptance and attention. The best way to get attention on social media is to do something edgy or crazy. Last year, in the most dramatic example yet, teens across the world took to setting themselves on fire.

I'm not kidding. The #FireChallenge hashtag was one of the most popular in August. Visit http://www.komando.com/happening-now/265191/the-latest-bizarre-internet-trend-is-putting-children-at-risk for my coverage of the shocking trend. This isn't the first or last dangerous "game" to appear online. Visit http://www.komando.com/tips/279112/7-dangerous-games-the-kids-play-that-you-dont-know-about to learn about seven other "games" your kids shouldn't be involved in.

If your kid does use Vine, or any social media site, be sure to friend, follow or join them on it to monitor what they're doing and saying. You might also occasionally look at their phone to confirm which apps they have installed, or even review their activity on the site. You'll want to know if they're running with a dangerous crowd or doing something stupid or worse.

4. Whisper

Whisper is an app built specifically for spreading rumors and secrets. It lets users post pictures and text anonymously. Apps like Whisper could potentially be a good outlet for teens as anonymous confessions can help people unburden themselves.

However, Whisper shares the secrets based on geographic location, so the users nearest to you are the ones more likely to see your secret. If your child reveals too much, it can put them in a dangerous situation with friends or adversaries.

The most dangerous apps for teens use GPS tracking to bring people physically together. Cyberbullying is much more hurtful when the person bullying your child moves from online to in-person abuse. In this case, Whisper seems like it could cause teens more harm than good.

5. 9Gag

9Gag is one of the most popular apps to distribute memes and pictures online. The risky part for teens lies within the fact that all kinds of pictures are shared on 9Gag. These pictures aren't moderated and could come from any uploader and feature terrible images you don't want kids seeing.

Not only that, but some 9Gag users are cyberbullies and abuse other users online. Many of the people guilty of "swatting," or getting the police to raid an innocent person's house, come from 9Gag. Visit http://www.komando.com/happening-now/252553/swatting-cops-bust-teen-for-30-dangerous-hoaxes to learn more about swatting and how to protect your kids from becoming a victim.

If your child has to get their humor fix from somewhere, always try to make sure that they're getting it from a place with rules and regulations that commit to keeping underage users protected.

If your parenting today, here are two more important tips you might find useful:

* 7 dangerous games the kids play

* 5 places the kids hang out online (Hint: It's not Facebook!)

MEMBERS OF THE Leadership Floyd County Academy class held its recent session at the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center. After learning about the many services offered at Job Corps, the group assembled in the gymnasium to participate in teambuilding activities on the low ropes course.

Leadership Floyd County Academy holds third professional development session

PRESTONSBURG — The Leadership Floyd County Academy class met recently at Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center for its third professional development session, which focused on teambuilding and the use of social media for networking.

Paula Davis, Job Corps finance and administration director, welcomed the group and provided class members an overview of the services offered at Job Corps. She explained how community members can help spread the word about the programs offered at the center. The group also heard from other department managers who elaborated on the center's curriculums and events.

After learning about the many services offered at Job Corps, the leadership group assembled in the gymnasium to participate in teambuilding activities on the low ropes course. The low ropes course is designed to build trust and communication skills among team members through physical and mental challenges. Each challenge required group interaction, good communication and leadership skills to succeed.

The activities were meant to draw on the knowledge and ideas of each group member to propel the team to success. After completing each low ropes course element, the facilitators guided group members to reflect upon their experience and explore how they functioned as a team.

Following the completion of the low ropes course, the group reconvened for lunch prepared by the Job Corps Center's culinary department.

After lunch, Jimmy Slone, business community liaison, conducted a presentation of networking through the use of social media. The presentation focused on the positive and negative uses of social media. She reminded the group that once you put something on social media, it's going to be seen.

After the social media presentation, Slone concluded the day's activities by taking the group on a tour of the Job Corps campus.

The 2014-15 Floyd County Leadership class consists of Danya Anderson, McDowell ARH; Kelli Ayers, Big Sandy Community & Technical College; Crystal Coleman, Skeans Marathon; Joe Campbell, Big Sandy Community & Technical College; Emmitt Hamilton; Danita Reynolds, US Bank; Whitney Layne, First Commonwealth Bank; Stephanie Stratton, Citizens National Bank; and Heath Wiley, Gearheart Communications.

The next Leadership Floyd County session will be in Frankfort and focus on legislative issues.

For additional information on the Leadership program, contact the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce at 606-886-0364.
